Amendment proposed

Senate member seeks his own referendum

By CHAD GALLAGHER
Staff writer

A Faculty Senate member is proposing a constitutional amendment that would allow faculty members to create their own referendums.

In an effort designed to better represent the faculty, senate member Lankford Walker is proposing the faculty be allowed to draw up their own referendums on different matters if 20 percent sign a petition asking for one.

"This amendment will assure that the general faculty will be heard," Walker said.

Walker said he drafted the amendment after several faculty members said they were disappointed that the senate voted 11-4 against a referendum on the strategic plan at the Sept. 27 meeting.

About 150 faculty members, nearly 33 percent, signed an informal petition asking for a referendum about the strategic plan, the university's plan to guide them to the year 2000.

There are more than 500 eligible voting faculty at Eastern.

"The faculty members I spoke to felt disappointed that the senate ignored a petition drawn by nearly 33 percent of the faculty," said Walker, who voted in favor of a referendum.

According to the senate constitution, the faculty can vote on an amendment if 10

Jorns addresses athletic cuts

By DAVE HOSICK
Student government editor

Eastern President David Jorns fielded questions Wednesday from Student Senate members concerning the elimination of two sports programs.

Senate members asked Jorns about the effects of gender-equity legislation that forced the elimination of Eastern's men's swimming and wrestling teams.

"The unfortunate part of this legislation is that Eastern was picked among the first schools to be evaluated," Jorns said. "But sooner or later, all schools that receive aid were going to be affected."

Gender-equity legislation, enforced by the federal Office of Civil Rights, is aimed at ensuring all institutions that receive federal aid have an equal number of men's and women's sports teams.

Jorns said the deciding factor in the way Eastern's programs were evaluated was its ratio of men to women athletes. Eastern's athletic programs are currently composed of 70 percent men and 30 percent women, he said.

"To tell you the truth, it really offends me that we had to cut the swimming and wrestling teams," Jorns said.

Jorns: IBHE bonus uncertain

By ADAM McHUGH
Administration editor

Eastern President David Jorns said Wednesday he is unsure if the Illinois Board of Higher Education will offer the university a monetary bonus for complying with one of this year's board initiatives.

Jorns presented the university's productivity report at the board's monthly meeting in Chicago Wednesday, outlining the areas where Eastern reallocated funding to comply with the IBHE's Priorities, Quality and Productivity Initiative.

But even though Eastern has reallocated nearly $3 million for salary increases and improvements in instructional areas, Jorns said a bonus is not necessarily in the school's future.

"There has been no mention of a bonus yet," Jorns said. "We won't have any sense that we will be receiving one for quite some time."

Last year, the IBHE set aside $2 million in bonuses for universities which "fully complied" with the PQP Initiative.

Eastern faculty salaries rank below average

By ADAM McHUGH
Administration editor

Despite a 3.5 percent salary increase, Eastern's faculty are still paid about $10,000 less than the average state university educator, according to a report by the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

All ranks of faculty – professor, associate professor, assistant professor and instructor – combine to make $9,900 less than the Fiscal Year 1994 average of $47,600, according to the report.

The average weighted salary at Eastern during the fiscal year was $37,700. The fiscal year runs from July to June.

The University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana recorded the highest salaries, holding a weighted average of $57,300.

The University Professionals of Illinois, Eastern's teacher union, stressed the issue of equal pay among comparable institutions during its salary increase negotiations with the Board of Governors last month. This year's increase will give all faculty a 3.5 percent – $81 per month – raise along with a 1.75 percent increase of their current salary. The change is expected to take effect next month.

Chapter President Laurent Gosselin said this year's increase "closes the gap" in terms of other state schools. But Eastern is still well behind the state average, he said.

The BOG will likely approve this year's salary increase at its Oct. 27 board meeting at Chicago State University.

"We have been trying to close the gap for years," Gosselin said. "This

Blood drive will try second time to reach goal

By JANICE HUNT
Staff writer

Blood drive organizers will try again Friday to help replenish area hospitals' blood supplies after failing to reach their goal last month.

The American Red Cross will seek donations from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Old Ballroom of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

Friday's blood drive was scheduled to compensate for the annual fall blood drive, which fell 212 pints short of its goal.

"It was a terrific effort," said Dave Cline, regional coordinator for the American Red Cross. "However, our hospitals were anticipating EIU to collect 1,200 pints of blood, and we fell drastically short."

"It has had a specific impact on the hospitals who were expecting the blood."

The goal for Friday's drive is 200 pints.

In the east-central Illinois region, blood transfusions are needed by 5,000 people each week, Cline said.

A "code yellow alert" is in effect throughout the Missouri-Illinois region, meaning supplies are dangerously low, Cline said. The supply of type O blood is down more than 40 percent and type B is down 50 percent.

"Area hospitals are relying on us and the EIU community," Cline said.

Cline said past campus blood drives typically collected 1,500 to 1,600 pints each, but recently have taken far fewer donations.

percent of the eligible faculty sign a petition asking for an overall faculty vote, but they cannot petition to draw their own referendums.

Walker's proposal would allow referendums to be drawn by the general faculty.

Senate Chairman John Allison said Walker's proposal is a "very good idea" that would better represent the faculty.

"If a significant number of people wish to have a referendum on an important issue then they should have it," Allison said.

After a petition by 10 percent of the faculty, an amendment is sent through a three-step process before it is sent to Eastern President David Jorns and the Board of Governors for official approval. Those steps are:

- A copy of the proposed amendment is distributed to all faculty at least two weeks before a vote.

- A secret ballot vote is taken.

- A majority of the faculty must approve the amendment.

Women's soccer will become a recognized team sport as part of the legislation.

Senate members expressed interest in helping the swimming team with its efforts.

Swim team members asked the senate for help in their efforts to get the men's team reinstated as a recognized sport.

"I am sure that all the senate members will dip their hands into this as much as possible to see what this body can do," senate member Jason Anselment said.

In other business at Wednesday's meeting, the Student Senate:

- Voted to table a constitutional amendment aimed at restructuring the executive branch into four vice presidential positions because several senate members submitted changes to the proposal.

The amendment is scheduled to be considered at next week's meeting.

- Voted to create a referendum for a 50-cent fee increase for the Student Legal Services Board. The increase, which would go toward clerical work, would cost students $3 instead of $2.50. The referendum would appear on ballots in next month's campus elections.

- Heard from freshman Jason

Anderson, an environmental biology major, who asked senate members to explain why they allocated $1,500 to send two members to a leadership conference in Washington D.C.

"The main purpose of this conference is to bring back knowledge to help empower students," Senate member Rick Tucker said. "If we show the city that we have 10,000 students who are registered to vote, we can show that we have some power."

Jorns: IBHE

Although Eastern consolidated its six colleges in Spring 1993 in an effort to comply with the initiative, the IBHE did not grant a bonus to the university. Seven other state schools split the bonus money.

The decision was met with shock and disappointment among Eastern faculty, who felt saving $350,000 through the consolidation was deserving of a bonus.

Jorns said the university will be in "very good shape" if it receives a bonus, but added he is "not counting on anything right now."

"I haven't heard a word about the bonus yet," Jorns said. "At this juncture, all we can do is wait and hope the board decides to implement one this year."

To comply with this year's initiative, Eastern reallocated funds to display an emphasis on staff and instructional areas.

More than $650,000 was allocated to undergraduate areas while minority achievement programs received $79,000.

Eastern also put more than $2 million into early retirement payouts and salary increases.

The PQP Initiative, which was developed by the board in 1991, is a cost-cutting program that calls on universities to identify programs which should be cut or improved through funding.

Each year, all 12 state universities submit productivity reports to the board. The IBHE then makes recommendations and decides which schools will receive bonus money.

increase may help, but overall we are still lacking."

According to the IBHE report, which was published last week, all ranks of Eastern faculty were found to be lower than the state average. Professors had the biggest salary gap, nearly $13,000 away from their peers around the state.

The averages are as follows:

- Eastern professors earn $45,900 compared to the state average of $58,800.

- Associate professors at Eastern make $38,700, with the state figure at $44,800.

- Assistant professors at Eastern collect $33,800, while the state average is $38,100.

- Eastern instructors earn $23,200 compared to the average of $24,200.

President David Jorns said the university's professors are a "high priority," but it is difficult to pay them because of an overall lack of state funding.

"We just haven't had the money the past few years," Jorns said. "It is a problem across the state."

Last year, Eastern paid out almost $1.7 million for salary increases. Early retirement and sick leave payouts, which increased dramatically in fiscal year 1994, totaled more than $1.2 million.

The report also said the BOG, which oversees Eastern and four other state schools, combined for the lowest average salaries in the state.

Governors State University and Western Illinois University, which have the highest average salaries in the BOG system at $42,400, are still more than $5,000 below the average state figure.

BOG Spokeswoman Michelle Brazell said the state funding "is just not there anymore."

"We've been trying to close the salary gap among the BOG schools," Brazell said. "That is our main concern."

"We will probably have to address the state averages at a later time," she said.

The Board of Regents, which oversees Illinois State University, Northern Illinois University in DeKalb and Sangamon State University in Springfield, had the second lowest salaries in the state, averaging $44,600.

The Board of Trustees for Southern Illinois University at Carbondale and Edwardsville were the third lowest, with an average of $44,950.

March protests violence

By AMY HEEREN
Staff writer

As a demonstration against violence and rape, more than 50 people marched around campus Wednesday night holding candles, chanting slogans and carrying a banner pledging to "take back the night."

Roughly 25 Eastern students were involved in the mile-long march and chanted, "Take back the night - stop rape now."

The march, an annual event sponsored by the Sexual Assault Counseling and Information Service, was organized to bring together rape victims and their supporters to protest violence.

"Certainly not everyone here has been victimized by sexual assault, but for survivors, it's a special evening to come together to heal," said Bonnie Buckley, executive director of Sexual Assault Counseling Information Service agency.

"The march tonight was to raise awareness of the number of sexual assaults in this community and to show our support for the strength of sexual assault survivors," said Susan Woods, an associate professor of health studies and a founding member of the counseling service.

"It's also held to emphasize the need for safety on campus and in the community."

The demonstration concluded at the campus pavilion with a campfire, poetry readings and acoustic guitar music by a local rape survivor, Debbie Sweitzer.

"I find that when people don't listen to what you say, they listen to a song," Sweitzer said. "I use music as a tool to teach and inform."

The march was funded by Eastern's health studies department and the College of Education.

"The march was to say we want violence ended in our society for women, men and children," said Debra Witek, mother and a volunteer for the counseling center.

Witek's five-year-old daughter, Sarah Witek-Garret, also attended the march, just as she has every year for the last five years.

Witek-Garret said she was in the march "so people don't get hurt."

The Sexual Assault Counseling and Information Service is located in Lawson Hall, but is not affiliated directly with Eastern.

Cuban native speaks about Latino heritage

By AMY DAVIS
Staff Writer

People of all races need to become more informed about Latino heritage and history, a featured speaker for Latino Heritage Week said Wednesday night.

Himilce Novas, who was born in Cuba, addressed a crowd of more than 30 faculty and students, urging them to become more informed about Latino heritage and to appreciate the different cultures of her people.

"I am here to celebrate Latino History Month," she told the audience, "but for me it is a year-long celebration."

Novas is an author, journalist and poet who wrote the soon-to-be-released book "Everything You Need To Know About Latino History." She said she wrote the book because "so many of our Latino heroes and heroines are never talked about."

Novas said her book was designed to bring some attention to a culture that most people have little knowledge of, since Latino is not often taught in schools.

"Latino history is American history," she said, "and we need to make the two one."

"In a culture of exclusion, oppression, and obliteration, Latinos are recognized for only certain things like singing, dancing, or acting,"

Novas said. "In the past, Latinos have been given credit for things that they do from the neck down. We need to look at Latinos from the neck up."

She said it was a Latino man who made the often-quoted statement, "Those who do not remember history are doomed to repeat it."

"We are doomed also to be unable to celebrate the present," she added, "if we do not learn about our history."

Novas said during one particular period in history in the 1930s, more than 500,000 Mexicans were deported from the United States. These Mexicans, many of whom were American citizens, were taken from their homes and dumped at the Mexican border. Novas said they were not allowed to return until World War II.

Novas went on to say that by the year 2000, only 25 percent of the incoming work force will be made up of white men.

"Latinos are an incredibly talented and forceful group in this country," she said. "These people are the heart of our country."

Novas concluded her speech with a short video about immigration and a brief question-and-answer period.

The biggest challenge to educators is, she said "to see that new minorities are included so that they can be prepared to go on in life."

Tuition Review Committee to establish goals

By DAVE HOSICK
Student government editor

The Tuition Review Committee will today meet again with Eastern President David Jorns to establish its goals and examine the feasibility of earmarking how funds generated by tuition increases are spent.

The committee will meet at 4:30 p.m. today in the President's Conference Room in Old Main.

The committee was originally formed to examine the necessity of future tuition increases and to make public how all funds are being spent.

Committee member Jason Anselment said the committee will likely discuss its weight in fighting tuition increases.

"We hope to develop a coherent policy that is widely endorsed by students," Anselment said. "Any decisions the committee makes will be based on what student input tells us."

Anselment said he hopes Jorns will bring new insight from his meeting last week with the Illinois Board of Higher Education. Anselment said while he doesn't expect Jorns to have much news about the IBHE, Jorns should be able to offer insight into how the committee should deal with IBHE members in the future.

He said the committee has established three priorities when examining tuition increase proposals. These priorities include determining if there is a need for an increase, determining whether an increase should be applied before or after state appropriations are made and ensuring that there is a clear understanding of what the university needs.

The committee also hopes to have input on deciding when a tuition increase would take effect, how much of an increase is needed and how the money will be applied.

"We are looking at creating a tuition increase matrix where we would match up the amount of state appropriations with the funds needed to maintain the university and the amount of an increase, if any, is needed," Anselment said.

U.S., allies change focus to preventing crisis

KUWAIT (AP) — As Iraqi troops retreated from the Kuwait border, the United States and its allies turned their focus Wednesday to heading off future crises that might be provoked by Saddam Hussein.

Thousands of U.S. troops continued to stream into the region as insurance.

Meanwhile, six Persian Gulf countries committed their own troops to the allied effort after a meeting in Kuwait with Secretary of State Warren Christopher.

One option that Christopher pursued with the Gulf ministers and with British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd involved establishing through the U.N. Security Council a zone near the Kuwaiti border that would be off-limits to Iraqi tanks and other heavy military equipment. Iraqi flights already are banned in the area.

Defense Secretary William Perry was expected to continue those discussions when he arrived in the region Thursday. However, facing resistance from some allies, the White House was not publicly pushing the idea on Wednesday.

Although U.N. Ambassador Madeleine Albright said she had raised the idea at the United Nations, White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers told reporters, "That is not a proposal that we have shopped around."

The French, in particular, urged caution. Two French Cabinet ministers said Iraq had not violated any agreements and the West should not over-react.

Whatever the details of the allied response, Christopher said, "we are resolved and committed that Saddam should not be permitted to project the world into crisis at his own whim."

Saudi Arabia and five smaller oil nations — Oman, Bahrain, United Arab Emirates, Qatar and Kuwait itself — agreed to deploy part of their 19,000-man "Peninsula Shield" in Kuwait along with additional troops from each of the six. The total was not announced.

Back in Washington, a senior military official said at the Pentagon that a majority of the Iraqi forces that had been massed near the Kuwaiti border were moving away.

Eastern can take step into future with debit cards

Imagine being able to pay for everything from textbooks to laundry services with your student ID. Just slide the card through an electronic reader, and the money is deducted from an account.

This is the aim of a campuswide debit-card system that Eastern officials are looking at. The proposal promises to make on-campus purchases more convenient for students and could generate more money for the university in sales.

Editorial

It's a good plan for everyone involved. Plus, Eastern is already familiar with much of the needed technology through its food-service ID system in dining halls.

Unlike a credit card, the debit card draws money from an existing account, rather than billing the consumer later.

With a debit-card system, students or their parents may deposit money into the card's account before a purchase. Money is deducted from the account when a student uses the card.

Griffin Technology, the same company that manufactures the electronic checkers in food service dining halls, envisions a "one-card campus," where students can buy everyday goods and services with ID cards linked to an account with the university.

Once installed, the system could be used at retail-sales stores such as the Union Bookstore, the Sugar Shack or The Rathskeller. Debit cards could also pay for items at Health Service, vending-machine purchases or tickets to concerts and athletic events.

Starting in January, a debit-card system will be installed on some copying machines in Booth Library as the possible first step to building a campuswide system. That library service, along with the food-service equipment, puts Eastern in an ideal position to expand its debit-card technology.

A committee will be appointed to review the card proposal and decide whether to begin implementing it on campus.

Installing the necessary electronics initially would be expensive, with one card-reading computer costing as much as $1,000. But the system could quickly pay for itself by boosting spending and offering the sheer convenience of a readily accepted, easy-to-use debit card.

Students should seek out senate members, express concerns

Dear editor:

I was having a conversation with a friend the other night about one of our regular topics — Student Government. He began telling me in a raised voice what Matt Giordano should have the Board of Governors do with the extra money it wants from us. He said he wouldn't mind if the tuition hike was 6 percent as long as it was put toward the students, in projects such as updating our library.

As he was very passionately spouting his views at me, it became very clear what needed to be done. I looked at him square in the eye and told him that if he feels so strongly about this, he should probably go talk to Matt himself or any of the senate members we elected to represent us.

I implore the student body to do the same. If you feel so strongly about wanting something done, SAY SOMETHING! Don't just hold up signs of disapproval. Seek out the senate members you voted into office and express your concerns.

Their job is to represent you. They are not going to know what you want if you don't tell them.

It is a good thing that a group of students came to the senate meeting last week and showed that they were unhappy. But they didn't stick around to say what they would like to be done or to even hear what Giordano had to report. If they cared so much about the issue, they should have stayed to become informed.

Go find your senate members! If you don't know who they are, ask around. The person across the hall might know one. Your resident assistant might be one. Use them. Tell them what you want.

If you just say that what has happened is wrong, yet make no effort to try and do something, you are not helping. If you are not a part of the solution you are part of the problem.

Credit cards needed to build credit history for students' future

Dear editor:

Since my first days of reading The Daily Eastern News I have had to hold my tongue while reading columns written by your staff on the opinion page. I feel that the News may be the most liberal paper that I have ever read.

I should know about liberal newspapers, I grew up reading The Effingham Daily News. Though I usually stick to the topics that they can't bias, like the obituaries.

I said that I held my tongue. That is until now. I have read weeks and weeks of liberalism to the extreme in this paper. Liberalism akin to an appointment of one of Bill's friends to a Cabinet position. The point that has me most frustrated is the one made in last Wednesday's edition by Jeremy Kirk.

He stated that college students do not need credit cards or even a credit line for that matter. Try buying a house these days without credit.

Unless you plan on plucking down at least $150,000 in cash, you kind of need a credit line. What kind of banker would lend that kind of money to a person who has nothing in their credit history but a measly checking account. A pretty stupid one I would say.

I know personally of cases of people who are in their mid-20s, married, and both work who have a hard time getting credit. I would say it is to a person's advantage to get a credit card now.

Don't wait any longer or it may be too late. Do it now while the credit card companies are being generous with no annual fees, etc.

The one point that infuriated me most was that Kirk said that people go on wild spending sprees with credit cards. This is totally untrue, at least from my viewpoint. I have had a credit card for more than a year, I only work in the summer and am facing no problems whatsoever with my card.

The word here is self-control. Maybe more students should look this up in the dictionary and practice its definition in their own lives.

Less whining, more sacrificing necessary to help university

Dear editor:

As I sat griping, grousing, whining and complaining about the sorry state of financial affairs, wrestling with strategic planning and various other serious matters at Eastern, it suddenly occurred to me to make myself responsible for trying to solve at least a small part of the financial problem.

Before coming to Eastern four years ago, I was employed at a private, church-related university in New Orleans.

We had experienced similar problems and difficulties. A small, but significant step was taken by the administration and faculty: We decided not to take the raises that had been planned for the next fiscal year.

Many unanticipated benefits accrued. First and foremost, there was a positive financial impact within the institution as those funds were not sat on, but were judiciously reallocated.

The university community, public and private, correctly observed that here was a group of people who not only talked about loyalty, dedication and commitment, but actually demonstrated these admirable attributes in a very tangible manner.

Others were inspired and motivated to not only help us, but were sufficiently imbued with a spirit of giving to help others who were also financially strapped. A genuinely selfless gesture can reap wonderful results.

I have observed that when we receive a raise at Eastern, we are invariably negatively impacted in many ways throughout the university.

Instead of constantly wringing our hands and bemoaning our plight, we can make a sacrifice to help our university and help ourselves. Think about it!

Weaver seems more supportive of special interests than people

Dear editor:

Rep. Mike Weaver tells us that he cares. But who does he care about? Look closely at his record. It tells us that where our energy, environmental and social costs are concerned, he is representing the special interests, not us.

For example, House Bill 3313 would have established a hydroelectric power source to be constructed in Alton — a down-south measure that would have cheapened electricity in southern Illinois. How did Weaver vote? NO.

House Bill 3786 now requires all cement kiln plants that burn hazardous waste to place warning labels on cement bags sold in our state. Since no Illinois cement kilns burn hazardous waste, this measure gives Illinois cement kilns a business advantage — and gives all people in Illinois a health advantage. So what did Weaver do? He voted NO!

Senate Bill 1172 now requires utility companies to set aside money to repay former customers who have been overcharged. Do I have to tell you how Weaver voted? You guessed it. He voted NO.

Earlier this year I noted that Weaver's YES stance on SB 85 took away local governments' control over pesticides, this after a huge contingent of chemical lobbyists showed up in Springfield.

True to form, Weaver has more recently voted YES again. Thanks in part to his vote, now local people can't control what sort of waste sites they live around. Aren't you proud? Can't you wait to get that urban garbage here?

I'll stop with one more — House Bill 1721. This bill creates a task force to recommend policy for use of rubber-modified asphalt for paving. Of course, the bill is good for our economy, good for the environment and good for anyone who has a few thousand tires leaching into the water table. Of course, Mike voted NO.

Do you see a pattern to Weaver's stand?

Eastern student deals with injuries

By BRIAN HUCHEL

Since he was injured in a diving accident more than four months ago, former Eastern student Jaime Holtzer says he has come to accept losing the use of his hands and legs.

Holtzer, 19, was injured on June 4 when he dove from a river bank into the rocky waters of the Turkey Run State Park in Indiana and hit a rock. He broke two upper vertebrae, injuring his spinal cord.

Holtzer is currently paralyzed and uses a wheelchair.

He said he has managed to keep his spirits up despite the accident.

"It was hard to come to terms with (the paralysis)," said Holtzer, who is a member of the Sigma Pi fraternity. "I came to terms with it a lot faster than some, however."

Holtzer's life has changed a great deal since his accident. He and his family are currently attempting to purchase a van with a lift mechanism, a new wheelchair and a lift mechanism for his home. Sigma Pi fraternity is sponsoring a fund-raiser to raise money for these items.

Jeff Culler, philanthropy chair for the fraternity, said the organization has been discussing how to help the family since the beginning of the term.

"This year all the money we make will go to help Jaime," Culler said. "We are planning another fund-raiser for the spring."

The fund-raiser will be held at 7 p.m. Friday at The Hut, on the corner of Sixth and Harrison streets. The event will feature door prizes, a raffle and the band Plaid. A donation of $5 will be accepted at the door.

"When I first got hurt, I could barely move," said Holtzer, who is currently living with his family. "Now I can move my arms around. My hand doesn't work, but there's some feeling in my fingers."

Holtzer said he plans to return to Eastern by the 1995 fall semester.

As part of his recovery, Holtzer is involved in both physical and occupational therapy, the latter of which concentrates on retraining him to do simple day-to-day jobs such as brushing his teeth and combing his hair.

Holtzer will have a long wait to find out if he will be able to walk again because the swelling of his two upper vertebrae, which is causing his paralysis, may take up to a year and a half to decrease. Doctors will not know if he will be able to walk until this swelling has decreased.

"(The doctors) still don't know what is going to happen," Holtzer said. "Some people with the same injury are walking now, while others can't. It's kind of a long waiting game."

UB sponsors Latin band

The international music duo Correro Aero will continue the celebration of Latino Heritage Week tonight with a concert of Latin American music.

"They're different from Los Lobos and more electrifying than Menudo," said Chris Desmond, chairman for the University Board's Mini-Concerts Committee.

Correro Aero will play traditional music from Venezuela, Mexico and Argentina at 8 p.m. in the University Ballroom of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

Tickets will be sold at the door. Admission is $2 for students and $3 for the general public.

Members of the duo, Abel and Madeleine Rocha, have toured internationally as well-known Latino singers to a variety of concert halls and universities, according to a press release.

"Correro Aero is a whole different chapter in music," Desmond said. "You can't compare them to American music. It's like comparing Ice-T to Barry Manilow. You just can't do it."

The Mini-Concerts Committee of the UB, a student fee-funded organization that organizes programming for Eastern, is sponsoring the concert.

"We wanted to expose the ethnic background with a culturally magnifying sound," Desmond said.

About 200 people are expected to attend the concert.

Local costume store relocates

By MELANIE McCLAIN
Staff writer

President Bill Clinton is standing in the front window of a Charleston store playing his saxophone for baseball legend Babe Ruth, Cleopatra and the entire Flintstone family.

A local costume store, which recently relocated to a larger building Oct. 1, offers these and thousands of other costumes for this Halloween season.

Grand Ball Costumes & More, 609 Sixth St., is a costume store that can turn any customer into whoever he or she wants to be for a night, said owner Jayne Ball-Saret.

Ball-Saret, an Eastern theater graduate, said the store was originally in her home for five years but moved to its new warehouse location to exhibit the more than 4,000 costumes it offers.

"When people come into the store they just stand at the front door in awe," she said. "It's a great place to just come and look and get ideas."

If Eastern students want to rent costumes for a party, Ball-Saret said she suggests reserving early because business is picking up for Halloween.

"We have hundreds (of costumes) reserved already," she said. We never run out of costumes here. We figure if we rent half of what we got, we've had a good year."

To reserve a costume early, a customer must pay a deposit to hold it and then pay a rental fee when the costume is picked up.

Ball-Saret said O.J. and Nicole Simpson costumes have been popular this Halloween season.

"A lot of people rent Elvira, Freddy Krueger, devil, monk, priest and nun costumes," she said.

Ball-Saret said if her store does not have the costume a customer wants, she can make the costume herself.

"We custom-make the costumes ourselves," she said. "Most of the costumes we have are one-of-a-kind."

The average cost for an outfit and wig is $20 plus a deposit, and the cost of the deposit varies with the costume.

Customers get their deposit back if costumes are returned in good shape and on time, Ball-Saret said.

Ball-Saret said she also offers group discounts of 10 percent if there are six or more people in a party.

Throughout the Halloween season, Grand Ball Costumes & More will be open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

Haunted dungeon scheduled for Halloween

By MELANIE McCLAIN
Staff writer

The Charleston Jaycees will host a Halloween haunted dungeon during the final week of October.

The Haunted Dungeon will be held from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. Oct. 25 and 26 and from 7 p.m. to midnight Oct. 28 to 31 in the basement of Grand Ball Costumes & More!, 609 Sixth St.

Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12.

The dungeon will have 14 rooms and a maze.

Jayne Ball-Saret, owner of Grand Ball Costumes, approached the Jaycees with the idea of having the haunted dungeon in the basement of her store, said Bob Larson, president of the Charleston chapter.

"We're still real short of help," Larson said. "We're hoping to get some fraternities or sororities to man a room or decorate a room themselves.

"We're more than willing to have the help."

Construction on the haunted dungeon began two weeks ago and will be finished by the end of this week, Larson said.

This is the first time in two years the Jaycees will have a haunted house. The local chapter was dissolved for two years and then reassembled last September, Larson said.

Proceeds from the haunted dungeon will go to a Christmas shopping tour for underprivileged children.

Also, if a patron brings an old blanket to the dungeon on Oct. 26, their admission is free.

Larson said the blankets will be taken to the Appalachian Mountains for people who do not have them.

Soccer team forced to live with double-overtime tie

By DAN FIELDS
Staff writer

The Eastern men's soccer team went into double overtime at Quincy University Tuesday night, only to end up in a 1-1 draw.

The Panthers lit the scoreboard first when sophomore Mark Valintis knocked in Eastern's lone goal 37 minutes 16 seconds into the game. Valintis' goal was assisted by co-captain Brad McTighe and junior Steve Van Dyke.

But Hawks goalie John Kluba lived up to his billing as the top keeper in the Mid-Continent Conference as he stopped a flurry of Panther shots to keep Quincy in the game.

"We had numerous opportunities to score, but their goalie had some great saves," said Eastern head coach Cizo Mosnia. "He kept them in the game."

With his eleven saves, Kluba still leads the conference in goals-against average with 0.92 per game.

In the second half, Quincy finally was able to score on a play that caught the Panthers off guard.

Quincy got the ball on an Eastern violation. Before the Panthers could regroup, a Hawk player zipped the ball past sophomore goalkeeper Brian Ritschel. The goal was scored with 21:36 left in the game.

"The referee made a call and the players froze," Mosnia said. "Their team took a quick free kick and their player popped it in."

Although Eastern did not pick up its third consecutive win, Mosnia was pleased with his teams' effort.

"For the first time this season we had intensity throughout the whole game," Mosnia said. "The players turned it up a few notches and they looked sharp."

The only aspect that his team may have to work on is the mental side of the game.

"We had some mental breakdowns, but I'm not too worried about that," Mosnia said.

The Panthers next contest will be at 3 p.m. Friday when they host Mid-Con newcomer University of Missouri at Kansas City at Lakeside Field.

Freshman setter getting comfortable with star role

By ANTHONY NASELLA
Staff writer

If there was one thing that hampered the college recruiting process of Eastern volleyball setter Kara Harper, it was that the Colchester High School standout was perhaps too short to play competitively in college.

But now, as Harper has immediately established herself as one of the premier setters in the Mid-Continent conference in only her first collegiate season, it's the schools which passed her up that appear to be short - on the short end that is.

Harper has compiled 700 assists through Eastern's first 20 matches, which leads the Mid-Continent Conference. If she remains on her current pace, she will pass former Eastern standout Donna Sicher (1,236) for the most assists in a season.

"She's a very smart player," head coach Betty Ralston said. "She might not be tall, but she gets touches on a lot of balls. When I realized we needed a setter, I saw Kara as an ideal person for our program."

"She really plays very calm and under control. I know that she's going to be a great setter for the next four years. She just needs to get better defensively."

And remembering that Harper is only a freshman, the highest assist output by a freshman setter is all-time assist leader Amy Van Eekeren (903 in 1990), a feat that Harper will also pass if she remains on pace.

"I was very nervous at the beginning of the season," Harper admitted. "I was afraid that I wouldn't be able to perform as I had expected to. But it went a lot smoother than I thought, so I'm very happy about that."

"And my teammates really encouraged me this season," Harper said. "That really helped me out in terms of confidence. It has really been fun."

Van Eekeren, who has 3,811 assists for her career, has nothing but compliments about Harper's ability to make transition from high school to college.

"She's very good," Van Eekeren said. "She's made an excellent transition, because there is a big difference between the two levels. Coach (Ralston) said to me last year when she recruited her that she reminded her of me."

Ralston said she saw numerous positive points in Harper when she recruited her, not just on the court but in her classroom performance as Colchester's class salutatorian.

"Smart students tend to perform better on the court," Ralston said, upholding Eastern's high academic tradition. "She's very smart overall."

Harper, a three-year captain at Colchester, led her team to a 38-5 record and a second-place finish at the IHSA Class A State Tournament. Colchester reached the Elite Eight also in 1992 and 1990, when it finished third in the state. Colchester was 96-19 in Harper's career.

Harper says that kind of exposure to success, especially as a freshman in 1990, definitely helped her in her ability to handle pressure situations and help cut down on the butterflies that some players experience in the big games.

"That experience really helped for the future," Harper said. "I wasn't nervous in the coming years because I had gotten over the hype. It helps to be there before."

As for individual awards Harper might receive, she said she thinking more of team accomplishments.

I just want us to win conference," Harper said. "I haven't thought of any individual awards. I just want to see our team win."

Spoo

comment was 'that's what I came here to do, was to play,' Spoo said.

Swinning's parents, who made the trip from Ohio last weekend for the Northern Iowa game, will do the same when Swinning makes his first start at Western.

"My dad thought I was lying," said Swinning when he told his parents he was starting.

Spoo said that Mauch is not done at quarterback by any means, but that he may see some time at other positions.

Mauch has played some wide receiver in the past, and with the loss of utilityman Bill Korosec, Mauch could also take up the punt return duties.

"I think we'll explore other opportunities for him," Spoo said. "He's done that (played wide receiver and returned punts) in the past and if he's of a mind to do it, he can do it."

"If there's one player on our team that can do that, it's Pete."

Spoo said that his decision to go with Swinning in no way means that he is giving up on the rest of the season.

"I'm not throwing the towel in whatsoever," Spoo said. "I expect to win five (more) games and I think this is the best way to go about it."

Ex-coach Craft enjoying new post

But he knows associate A.D. job won't be his for long

By JOHN FERA
Staff writer

When people think of Eastern track and cross country, John Craft's name usually comes to mind.

But for the first time in 20 years, Craft is no longer yelling instructions or giving words of encouragement to his collegiate racers. This summer, Craft became acting associate athletic director when Joan Schmidt was demoted to faculty status.

"At times you have to work long hours and do multiple tasks at once," Craft said of his new role. "I've been thoroughly enjoying my duties. I like this dimension in my career."

Craft began his coaching career in 1974 as assistant men's track coach, a post served until 1979 when he became women's cross country coach and remained there until last fall. When Athletic Director Mike Ryan resigned, Craft took over as acting athletic director until Bob McBee was named the permanent replacement.

"I miss working with the young women (in cross country) and the coaching aspect," said Craft, a fifth-place finisher in the triple jump at the 1972 Olympics at Munich, Germany. "It's a new job for me."

McBee said a national search for an associate athletic director will probably begin in March. Schmidt's duties as associate A.D. have been handled by Craft and newcomer Jerome Rodgers, who recently took over as student academic services and compliance director.

A national search for a senior women's administrator will also begin next spring.

Craft did not say whether he would apply for the permanent associate A.D. post, but he showed strong interest in the position. He said one of his long-term goals is to land an A.D. post somewhere.

John Craft

athletics, coordinating sports information reports and setting up drug and substance education programs for athletes.

Craft also thinks that Eastern's new athletic administrative staff has taken an unfair beating for cutting its wrestling and men's swimming programs to achieve gender equity.

"Dr. McBee has been here three months, and the problems created by gender equity come about from prior administrators," Craft said. "It's not something he created. The idea is not to cannibalize men's sports, but to enhance men's and women's sports."

"People seem to have lost sight that we're trying to correct a decade of inequity,"

In the meantime, Craft says he's been busy acting as McBee's right-hand man, helping out with travel arrangements for Eastern he added.

Adjusting to a new and somewhat "green" athletic staff is one challenge Craft and the department face. Besides Rodgers, Steve Rich recently took over as assistant athletic director, Jim Schmitz as baseball coach and Rosanne Kramarski as men's and women's tennis coach. And in the meantime, the search for Eastern's first women's soccer coach is winding down.

Craft said it will take time for new athletic personnel to get adjusted to Eastern's athletics.

"The people coming in here are top-notch people," Craft said. "They need time to get oriented with EIU university."

McBee said he's been pleased with Craft's performance in the acting position. He mentioned that Craft has "a lot of energy" and is an excellent resource person.

"I think he's done an excellent job," McBee said. "John did a good job of keeping me informed in the interim before I came to work on campus. He's been an immense help to me."

are bleak.

"It seems like the bolt has been thrown in the door," Scarcliff said. "But nothing is ever over."

Student senate member Rick Tucker expressed little concern over the situation of both teams.

"I know Springfield and the (Illinois Board of Higher Education) are cutting back on sports that are not necessary," Tucker said.

Eastern president David Jorns said that there is not much else the university can do after spending countless hours over this topic with the Office of Civil Rights.

"The OCR suggested to add four sports," Jorns said. "But it would cost in excess of $300,000 per year."

When asked if the athletes had a chance to persuade officials to retain the two sports, Jorns replied "I don't think they'll be successful."

Women's tennis team rolls twice

By MATT MORFOOT
Staff writer

Consecutive shutout victories by the Eastern women's tennis team has left the Lady Panthers on a positive note heading into the conference tournament.

"The women did what they had to do," head coach Rosanne Kramarski said. "Everyone likes to have an easy win, and now we have to start practicing hard for the conference."

On Tuesday, the women defeated Northeastern Illinois, 9-0.

Samantha Wulfers, Terra Erickson, Kristy Sims, and Angela Waldhoff scored respective 6-0, 6-0 victories over Northeastern's Gerri Williams, Heather Sachf, Karen Gill and Sam Malinowski.

Stephanie Sullivan just missed blanking her opponent by scoring a 6-1, 6-0 victory over Shelly Hurst.

The sixth singles spot was won by default.

In doubles play, the combination of Geeta Dua and Erickson recorded an 8-2 victory over Williams and Sachf.

Wulfers and Melissa Welch defeated Hurst and Malinowski 8-0, while the third doubles match was won by default.

The lady netters then took on Illinois Wesleyan Wednesday, again defeating their opposition 9-0.

Sullivan and Sims recorded 6-0, 6-0 victories over Tracey Lehmann and Jill Martin of Illinois Wesleyan.

Wulfers defeated Amy O'Conner 6-4, 6-1, while teammate Dua scored a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Sarah Nance.

Welch capped off the singles scoring by recording a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Jen Greenwald.

Illinois Wesleyan defaulted at the No. 2 singles spot.

Doubles play found the team of Dua and Erickson scoring a 6-3, 6-2 victory over O'Conner and Nance.

Wulfers and Welch defeated Lehmann and Martin 6-0, 6-2, while the third doubles match was won by default.

To prepare for the conference meet, Kramarski said the women will work against the men in practice.

The Mid-Continent Conference Tournament will be held Oct. 21-23 in Youngstown, Ohio.

Swim teams talk to senate

By DAN FIELDS
Staff writer

In an attempt to keep its hopes from being sunk, members from Eastern's men's and women's swimming teams addressed the student senate Wednesday night about recent cuts in the athletic department.

Five men and four women comprised a group that demanded an explanation of why wrestling and men's swimming are going to be cut at the beginning of next season.

"Most students know what they can and can't do," said Sandra McCray, a member of the Eastern women's swimming squad. "We're not going to sit down and watch getting half of our team get dropped."

"We're going to make some noise."

McCray added that since it has been about two weeks since the cuts were announced, everybody was "still in shock about the whole thing."

Khris Scarcliff, a member of the men's swimming team, explained the team will try everything possible to keep their sport from going down the drain. He mentioned that this would include giving their best effort to head coach Ray Padovan.

"It's going to devastate Ray - he can't stand coaching just one team," Scarcliff said. "We're going to give Ray 110 percent this year."

"We're just going to haul ass and win everything we can."

Scarcliff is hopeful that there is some way to keep both wrestling and men's swimming as Division-I sports at Eastern.

But he realizes that the chances to keep both alive

Spoo: We need a change in direction

Panthers hoping QB change can spark turnaround

By PAUL DEMPSEY
Staff writer

Panther head coach Bob Spoo shocked everybody Tuesday with his decision to start freshman Mark Swinning in the Panthers' next game on Oct. 22 at Western Illinois University.

At Wednesday's weekly press conference, Spoo explained his reason for the switch.

"I would like to say in respect to Pete (Mauch) that he has done an outstanding job for us," Spoo said. "But he has taken us as far as I think he can take us, and I want to see if there's a change in direction that might be in our best interest.

"I think there is, and this is the opportune time to seek that opportunity."

Spoo used words like, "shock, disappointment, anger" to describe Mauch's reaction to the demotion.

Spoo also bypassed Ron Reichert, who had completed 23 of 42 passes for 269 yards in three games as a backup.

"My confidence level there is such that I would not want to put (Reichert) in that role," Spoo said.

Spoo said that his 2-4 Panthers having an off week this week influenced his decision to go with an inexperienced quarterback.

"That certainly helped - the fact that we had the extra time."

Although Swinning has not seen any playing time, Spoo said he is impressed with his size and throwing skills.

"He worked a lot in the preseason," Spoo said. "He is confident and learns well."

"It will be a tremendous challenge for him, there's no question about that."

The 6-foot 5-inch Swinning was a two-time first team all-conference pick at Waverly High School in Ohio, where he threw for 4,296 yards and 64 touchdowns in his career.

"As far as I knew I wasn't going to play at all this year," Swinning said. "I'm happy right now, but I do feel bad for Pete."

According to Spoo, Swinning was eager to get some playing time.

"When told about the opportunity, his

Women's soccer applicant ready to take next step

By JOHN BATES
Staff writer

Women's soccer coach applicant, Thomas E. Piccirillo, hopes to take the next step in his coaching career by securing his first Division I head coaching job with the Panthers.

"I think I've gotten to the point at Tiffin where we brought it as far as it will go," Piccirillo said. "I think Division I is the next step for me."

In 1991 Piccirillo coached the inaugural season of women's soccer at Tiffin University in Ohio, finishing the season with a 4-10 record.

"I was hired in mid-February, and when I got onto campus, they said here's your schedule - go get yourself a team," Piccirillo said. "We didn't even have a club at that point."

But since then, Tiffin has made the playoffs each season and is 11-3 this season while finding itself ranked 9th in the nation in the NAIA. And Piccirillo believes he can continue his own winning tradition at Eastern.

"I think it's a school, from what I hear, that makes a commitment toward winning," Piccirillo said.

Piccirillo also believes that his experience as an assistant coach at Dartmouth College, a smaller Division I school, and his experience as the head coach at Tiffin, a small-town college, should ease his transition to Eastern should he receive the job.

If he becomes the women's soccer coach, he plans to "go out into the street and do some major recruiting," which he believes will be the most important aspect to starting up the women's soccer team in the spring. After that he plans to evaluate the team during the spring of 1995.

"I feel (the team is) yearning for someone to come and lead them since they have the club status right now," Piccirillo said. "They're looking for more than that."

"The nice thing is you don't have to deal with the players saying 'this person did it this way.' All traditions are developed, and you get to develop your own traditions right from the start. You don't have to break anyone's bad habits or something that just isn't cohesive with what you're doing."

Brian Wiesner, the third applicant for the women's soccer coaching position, will be interviewed Thursday at the Lantz Building, followed by Steve Ballard on Oct. 19 and 20.
